Miami is known for its white-sand beaches, warm climate, delicious cuisine, Cuban coffee, and its Latin-American influences. Some popular attractions include Miami Beach, South Beach, Zoo Miami, Bayside Marketplace, Little Havana, Ocean Drive, and Deering Estate. The second largest city in Florida, Miami is known for its rich heritage and many cultural influences. ... It is nicknamed the “Capital of Latin America” because of its high population of Spanish-speakers — Miami is the second largest U.S. city with a Spanish-speaking population.

The White House late last month said the US will lift all travel restrictions for incoming non-citizens and non-immigrant travellers from November 8, with only limited exceptions.

They will be required to be fully vaccinated and produce proof of their COVID-19 vaccination prior to boarding a flight to the country.

Passengers will need to show their vaccination status, and the airlines will need to match the name and date of birth to confirm the passenger is the same person reflected on the proof of vaccination, according to an official statement issued earlier.

SHOPPING

MICCOSUKEE CRAFTS: The crafts by the Native American tribes of Miccosukee such as sturdy baskets woven from sweet grass, beaded jewellery, palmetto husks, dolls in patchwork dress, patchwork clothing, keychains and bags and the hand-carved toys, bowls, spoons and other woodworks are souvenirs of living history. On a tour through Miccosukee Indian Village, you will see how these crafts are made and also buy the handicrafts.

STUNNING BEACHWEAR: The most obvious attraction for fashion fans is beachwear in Miami. Several fashion designers and influencers, including Bruce Weber, a world-renowned local resident, Lazaro Hernandez, and Gianni Versace, have influenced the city's fashion. Not only are there many boutiques and designer stores in Miami, but there are also pop-up stores that get in the picture every now and then. They present new and fresh designs in beachwear, swimwear, and the like that young people may like.

CIGARS: No matter whether you are a newbie stogie or a sophisticated aficionado of premium cigars, Miami has you covered with everything from local hand-rolled cigar sticks to Cohibas, Monte Cristos to Havanas. You will hit a jackpot at Calle Ocho of Little Havana on the 8th Street with authentically crafted cigar cutters, presentation boxes and crafted humidors, many of which feature the exotic wooden Indian figure. Get 1 cigar or joint to smoke or a bundle of 3 and more in a crafted box as a souvenir in Miami.

CUISINE

STONE CRABS: Here's a seasonal dish that's served from October to March in seafood restaurants the length and breadth of Florida. The stone crab yields what might be the most tender and succulent meat of any of its sibling crustaceans. Served cracked and chilled on ice, Florida stone crab claws can vary in size, and the sweet, lobster-esque flesh needs barely any seasoning.

FISH SANDWICH: In Miami – how could it be otherwise this close to the Atlantic? – fish-eaters are spoiled for choice, both in terms of quantity and variety. No wonder Miami New Times has a “best seafood sandwich” category as part of its Best of Miami Awards. One place we'll return to again and again is Garcia's Seafood Grille & Fish Market – its mahi-mahi sandwiches are the best thing since sliced bread. And whether grilled, blackened or fried, nothing beats a freshly cooked grouper filet wedged between two freshly baked buns.

CUBAN SANDWICH: This is probably the most authentic Miami dish of them all. The Cuban sandwich is a variation of a ham and cheese sandwich that originated in cafés catering to Cuban migrant workers in Key West during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Made with fresh Cuban bread, yellow mustard, roasted pork, baked ham, Swiss cheese and sliced dill pickles, the Versailles Restaurant is famous for its version of this classic Miami dish.

KEY LIME PIE: Attention all you sweet teeths out there. If you're coming to Miami, do not leave without trying at least one heavenly slice of key lime pie. The dessert is Miami in a mouthful – in fact, it's the flavor of Florida. We suggest you stop by the Icebox Cafe in Miami Beach, where they will happily serve up a nine-inch-deep key lime pie.
